

The Christian faith promotes love, honesty, compassion, and random acts of kindness. These are critical elements of healthy community. K-Love which is broadcast on 94.3 in the Chicago area is the best Christian station on the radio. Non-believing friends of mine have told me how they like the music and how the messages hit home with them. K-Love helps promote good "life" choices. The support of the radio station keeps growing every year. Obviously the music and the message from this station are filling a critical void in our community. It would be a travesty if this station were to be replaced by an LPFM station that promotes some twisted secular thinking. When so many things in our culture promote BAD choices (excessive drinking, casual sex with multiple partners, swearing and profanity), can we stand up for something that promotes habits that strengthen relationships and neighborhoods?
